COMMENT OF THE DAY

Sharp Retort

THE patience of Government officials in replying to tedious points raised by unofficial members of the Legislative Council is as a rule commendable. Understandably, needless reminders to Government to carry out its appointed duties can be tiring and even exasperating. But Mr Arthur Clarke's somewhat trenchant retort to Mr C. E. M. Terry's speech was little surprising, indeed unnecessary, since he appears to have exploited a lack of precision rather than an inherently wrong principle contained in the unofficial member's remarks. Mr Terry's point is that Hongkong's own funds should be available to the Colony rather than to other territories and he points to the extent of our sterling and Malayan investments. Further he drew attention to the statement of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank chairman that governments in the territories in which the bank operated (unspecified) took advantage in 1956 of high interest rates in Britain to transfer some of their funds there. He does not suggest that Hongkong remitted its surplus funds abroad for this reason, but asks for Government's views on local investment of these funds.

In his reply the Financial Secretary said: "Other things being equal we keep our money where it can earn good rates of interest." The statement of the Colony's assets and liabilities does in fact show under the heading "surplus balances" that sterling investments went up from £14.6 million in 1954 to £24.6 million in March, 1956. In terms of dollars this is an increase of $160 million. In addition in the same period $12 million was invested in Malayan loans.

The point that Mr Terry made, furthermore, that public funds should be available to Hongkong for our own development—it was here his point lacked sufficient clarity—appears to be one that the Financial Secretary not only agrees with in one specific instance (the recall of some $92 million in sterling funds to ease the tight credit situation in the Colony) but is an essential part of a principle which Government now recognises may well become official policy, i.e. recognition of Government's need to have "a much greater say" in credit policy.

The point that the chairman of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank makes—essentially the same as Mr Terry's—is that an over-investment of government funds abroad may result in a slowing down of the pace (of development) "as this deprives the banking system of what is almost its life-blood."

ANOTHER point made by the Bank chairman which incidentally provides some justification for Mr Clarke's views on Government requiring a "greater say" in credit policy, is that its widespread banking activities in the Far East require greater liquidity "than may be considered necessary by bankers whose interests are mainly confined to one single country." Financial stresses and strains in this part of the world are going to affect the availability of credit here, and it is quite certain that they are, it is in the public interest that Government should have its "greater say" (though why not use the unpleasant word "control" and be done with it) to ensure that whatever measures are taken against speculation, investment for sound productive purposes is not in any way hampered. It seems a ludicrous when capital remittances to the Colony total something like $200 million in a year that some "worthy" industrial undertaking should have to go begging. Why? Because of insufficient credit!

CANAL DUES: BRITISH PLAN Egypt To Collect And Surrender Half

TEMPORARY FORMULA

London, Mar. 27. The British Government is believed to be ready to accept a temporary compromise formula on the payment of transit fees through the Suez Canal, while maintaining that a permanent settlement should be founded on the six principles adopted by the Security Council last October, informed sources said today.

The Government has not yet made a final decision on this subject, pending the outcome of the talks between the UN Secretary-General, Mr Dag Hammarskjöld and Egyptian President, Gamal Abdel Nasser, which has not yet been announced. The decision will also depend on consultations with the co-authors of the "interim project"—France, Norway and the United States.

USE OF FUNDS
British observers said the British Government was now ready to discuss a formula which would allow Egypt to collect all the transit fees providing she promised to turn over a percentage (probably 50 per cent) to a United Nations organization.

These funds would be used for the payment of compensation to the "International Suez Canal Company" and for the upkeep and development of the Suez Canal.

SHIPOWNERS ADVISED
British shipowners are being advised to avoid using the Suez Canal until the position is more clear, Mr David Ormsby-Gore, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, said today.

He had been asked in the House of Commons if he had any further statement to make on the payment of dues for passage through the canal. He replied: "These matters are under discussion not only between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Egyptian Government, but between Her Majesty's government and other major users of the canal."

"Meanwhile, British shipowners are being advised to avoid using the canal until the position is more clear," Mr Ormsby-Gore said.

CANAL TRAFFIC

Port Said, Mar. 27. Four ships of from 3,000 to 4,000 tons passed through the Suez Canal today, flying the flags of Costa Rica, Panama and Greece. All paid transit fees to the Egyptian authorities.

Another seven ships of between four and eight thousand tons were waiting at Suez for permission to sail. There were three Italian, two Russian, one Rumanian and one Turkish vessels.—France-Press.

Ike Was Not Amused

Washington, Mar. 27. President Eisenhower angrily brushed aside at his press conference today a suggestion that he had ordered two helicopters to take him to the golf course. A reporter asked the president whether he felt that in all the talk that was going on about cutting the budget he would be willing to do without the two helicopters which the reporter said had been ordered to transport the president, including visits to the golf course. The question raised a ripple of laughter in the packed press conference room but the president did not join in. Flushed and grim-faced, he barked out that no helicopters had been procured for him to go to the golf course. When the reporter tried to follow up the question the president tartly observed that he did not think much of the question and would not discuss it any further.

Voters, observers said that they had never seen the president so indignant.—China Mail Special.

50 FEARED DEAD IN DYNAMITE EXPLOSION: HUNDREDS HURT

Mexico City, Mar. 27. Two tremendous dynamite explosions levelled a city block of adobe houses today and killed at least 16 persons. An estimated 235 others, mostly spectators and firemen watching rescue operations in the rubble of flattened homes and wreckage, were injured in the second blast, which came unexpectedly 15 minutes after an explosives warehouse blew up. Dr Roberto Gomez, commander of the Mexican Red Cross, said 14 to 16 bodies had been recovered.

Pieces of bodies were strewn over an area of more than 500 yards in the slum section, hit by the explosions, near the boundaries of Mexico City's International Airport. Dr Gomez said he feared "at least 50 persons may have died". Seven firemen, including Lt Rafael Garcia, head of the airport fire squad, were reported among the dead. Twenty tons of mixed TNT, dynamite and percussion caps went up in the warehouse explosion. The blast broke windows in the airport passenger terminal two miles away. A hole 20 feet deep, slowly filling with water, marked the site of the storehouse. Every building within 200 yards was shattered. Most of the houses were one-storey adobe shacks, jammed together in a sandy wasteland along the Mexico City-Puebla highway.

Officials said one dead man and 85 injured were taken to Green Cross hospitals. The Red Cross recovered between 60 and 65 injured. Social Security ambulances also recovered "many" injured. Firemen reported they believed no one was in the warehouse at the time of the blast, the cause of which was not known.—United Press.

Bulganin Fulminates BRITAIN IS WARNED ABOUT POLICY

London, Mar. 27. Marshal Nikolai Bulganin, the Soviet Prime Minister, said today that the British and American governments had confirmed after the Bermuda conference they were determined to "continue their policy of military blocs and continue the arms race."

"They refused to discontinue tests of atomic and hydrogen weapons and came to an agreement whereby Britain would be supplied with guided missiles from the United States," he told a Soviet-Hungarian friendship meeting in the Kremlin, according to Moscow Radio.

Diabolical Endeavour To Blow Up House

Rome, Mar. 27. An angry tenant under eviction notice tried to blow up a house in Rome by turning his apartment into a gas-filled bomb, the police disclosed today. He used a cuckoo clock to try to set it off.

The 60 other tenants were saved when the police arrived sooner than expected with the order to evict him. They entered the apartment just before the cuckoo clock bomb was to have gone off; they saved the day by switching off the electric current.

Detectives identified the tenant as Atorino Natoli, 67, a former artillery officer and an electronics expert. Natoli escaped and the police ordered a city-wide search for him.

Natoli had sealed all doors and windows with plastic tape, spread gasoline-soaked rags on the floors, and then opened a number of bottles containing gas. Three electric wires running from the gas-filled room to a metal plate provided the fuse.

SHORT-CIRCUIT

The cuckoo clock was set so that its centre weight would short-circuit the wires at 3.40 p.m., setting off the explosion. No one was hurt. Natoli also connected the wires with an electric switch in the corridor. If the police had switched on the corridor light before switching off the electricity, the house would have been blown up.

The plan failed only because the police arrived with the eviction notice a few minutes sooner than expected. The doorman told them Natoli had gone to a nearby coffee shop and would return shortly. He failed to show up and they smashed in the door and discovered the plot.—United Press.

Israel Warns Jordan

Jerusalem, Mar. 27. An Israeli official warned Jordan today that dispatch of Saudi-Arabian troops to Jordan would be regarded as a breach of the 1949 armistice agreement. Reports from Egypt last night said that Saudi-Arabian troops were moving into the Jordanian port of Aqaba, opposite Israel's Southern port of Eilat. Mr Joseph Tikos, director of Armistice Affairs in the Israeli Foreign Ministry, said: "If Saudi-Arabia or any other Arab country sends troops to occupy Aqaba port or any other part of Jordan which the British evacuated in that country such action would constitute a breach by Jordan of its armistice agreement with Israel."—United Press.

Plane Disaster Disclosure

Manila, Mar. 27. Cebu Governor Sergio Osmeña, Jr., who conducted an investigation into the plane crash which killed late President Ramon Magsaysay, said on Wednesday night that the President's plane was overloaded.

"It was overloaded according to Civil Aeronautics Administration and Philippine Airlines standards," Osmeña bluntly told newsmen.

He added, however, that the plane was not overloaded "according to the standards of the Philippine Air Force."

The twin-engine "Mount Pinatubo" was a Philippine Air Force plane piloted by Philippine Air Force pilot, which had been turned over to the late President for his personal use. It crashed on March 17 shortly after taking off from Cebu City for Manila.

QUEEN TO BE INVITED TO VISIT CANADA

Ottawa, Mar. 27. Queen Elizabeth will be asked to visit Canada before going to the United States if she comes to North America this year, Canada's Prime Minister, Mr Louis St Laurent, said today. Interviewed at Ottawa's Up-lands airport on his return from the Bermuda conference with Britain's Prime Minister Mr Harold Macmillan, Mr St Laurent said there probably would be a Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London early this summer. He said no definite decision was reached during the Bermuda conference concerning a visit by the Queen. "It will be recommended by the United Kingdom to her

Death In Blaze Climaxes Life Of Tragedy

Montreal, Mar. 27. A lifetime of tragedy ended today for a 74-year-old, thrice-married Indian when he, his third wife and their four children died in the blazing inferno of their tenement home. All six were killed when flames, fanned by neighbours until too late, raced through their dwelling in a slum area when he started to light a stove before breakfast.

The victims were listed by morgue officials as Orla Leboeuf, 74, his wife, 45, and their children, aged 8, 4, 2 years, and eight months. The youngest and the eldest were girls and the other two boys.

It was a tragic climax to three marriages, each marked by misfortune.

Twenty Children

Leboeuf's first wife was knocked down and killed by a car two weeks after their marriage, some time before 1930. He had 20 children by his second wife. Eighteen of them perished in an epidemic of influenza that swept Canada in 1918. His wife died later.

His third wife was a Belgian orphan who immigrated to Canada several years ago. They had lived in Montreal, within commuting distance of the Caughnawaga Indian reservation, since last December. When he worked, Leboeuf earned a meagre living by selling junk. But he was often out of work. Members of a religious order had contributed a few dollars a week to help the family pay their rent and buy a few groceries.—United Press.

CAR AMBUSHED

London, Mar. 27. Israel radio said today a civilian car was ambushed on the Elath road in the Negev, about 40 miles north of the port of Eilat, yesterday, and one civilian was wounded. The driver succeeded in withdrawing from the danger area, the radio said, quoting a military spokesman.—Reuter.

Singapore Talks ONLY ONE QUESTION TO SETTLE

London, Mar. 27. Singapore today moved nearer the end of colonial status with further agreements at her constitutional talks here with Britain. The conference, framing the outline of internal self-government for the island's 1,200,000 people today agreed on arrangements for subsequent view of new constitution and also on citizenship and voting rights.

The nature of the agreement was not disclosed in the communiqué which followed the eleventh session of the 17-day-old talks. Conference sources thought it unlikely, however, that there had been any major departure from the previously expressed Singapore views that the constitution should be reviewed within four years and that Singapore citizenship could be granted after a seven-year residential qualification.

Major Issue

These latest agreements, together with those reached yesterday giving Singapore a local man as Crown representative instead of a Briton as at present, mean that only one major issue still remains unresolved. Conference sources speculated that this might be settled at the next meeting on Friday.

The outstanding problem is the question of the distribution of the overlapping spheres of responsibility. General agreement now seems to have been reached that an executive security council with British, Singaporean and Malayan Federation membership would co-ordinate defence and security while another body, described as being consultative, would deal with matters affecting external relations. Details of this machinery have not yet been settled and it is expected by conference sources that Friday's conference session will try to clear them up.—Reuter.

"HUSH HUSH" TRIP REPORT

Singapore, Mar. 28. The Straits Times said today that 20 of Malaysia's wealthiest tin miners were making a "hush hush" trip to Peking to try to sell ore to China. The newspaper, which did not disclose the source of the information, said six of the delegation left Singapore by sea for Canton at the weekend and the rest were expected to leave by air on Saturday. All were from the tin-mining centre of Ipoh, in north Malaya, and represent "the backbone of the mining industry in Malaya," the Straits Times said.—Reuter.

Border Outrage

Kampala, Uganda, Mar. 27. Five Sudanese were killed and six wounded on the Uganda-Sudan border when a district commissioner's party returning from North Uganda was ambushed, it was officially reported today.

A company of the King's African Rifles was sent to comb the border area for the gang who are believed to be former members of the Sudan defence force who mutinied two years ago.—United Press.

US EXPERT ADVOCATES SE ASIA AID CUT

Washington, Mar. 27.
Mr Clement Johnston, chairman of the Board of the US Chamber of Commerce, recommended today that foreign aid to Southeast Asia be cut "by at least half" during the next two years.

In a special report to Congress, Mr Johnston also asked that increased emphasis be placed on education and technical assistance in Asia.

He made an on-the-spot survey of Vietnam, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Burma and Indonesia at the request of the special Senate Committee to study the foreign aid programme. Mr Johnston's was the seventh of 10 on-the-spot surveys conducted by different persons for the Special Committee.

Primary Role

The report said the primary role of the United States in Southeast Asia "should be to inspire by example and to assist in developing competency through education and technical training, not to shoulder the whole burden of normal operation."

Each country and its special problems were covered in the report. But Mr Johnston also made several recommendations covering the entire area.

"The original programme of military and economic aid were necessary," he said, "and results thus far have justified the large expenditures of money, material and manpower involved. An otherwise inevitable collapse has been postponed and possibly prevented."

Because of this aid, he said, "it is now possible to build more slowly and soundly."

Cut By Half

But, Mr Johnston added, "the dollar volume of aid to Southeast Asia can and should be reduced by at least half during the next two years." He said, "increasing emphasis should be placed upon education and upon technical assistance."

"The most glaring failure to date," he stated, has been the lack of any significant progress toward the achievement of a sound economy."

He alleged that some South-east Asian Governments were using United States arms to keep themselves in power while merchants made "windfall profits" from American support of local economies.

Mr Johnston estimated at $20 million a month "the unnecessary cost to the US taxpayer" of supporting the currencies of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia "at the arbitrary rate of 35 piasters, or other local currency, to the dollar."

He said the official "free market" rate of 75 piasters was overshadowed by the local black market rate of 100 to 120.

Mr Johnston said the time seemed ripe for "substantial reductions in troop and equipment levels" in Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and Thailand even though they "strongly protest" against the US reducing arms shipments.

"More than one of these nations is using US funds to build and equip armed forces, some of whose officers and men seem to think of their mission only in terms of ancient hostilities and rivalries," Mr Johnston reported.

"Communism and Communist aggression obviously do not constitute the primary menace, nor provide alone a sufficient challenge to motivate current military training programmes."

"As long as the Southeast Asia Treaty Organisation (with its implied promise of unlimited American support) offers security against Communist aggression, it would appear that the military forces of Cambodia, Laos, Thailand and South Vietnam are in every case less and more heavily equipped than the needs of mere internal security would dictate."

Ike Defends

But President Eisenhower today again took a strong stand against cuts in the United States foreign aid programme. Eisenhower, speaking at a press conference, said this programme was necessary not only to secure the American position and prestige in the world, but also to defend the security and peace of the United States.

The President was replying to a reporter who asked whether the Administration has planned to reduce the national budget, which amounted to 72 milliard dollars for the 1957-58 year.

He said it would be futile for the United States to expect to preserve its present status in the world if heavy cuts were made in important national or international projects, like foreign aid or defence.

Eisenhower stressed that foreign aid granted by the US was not aimed at buying friendship, it was aimed at helping nations that were proud of their independence but had low living standards.

Mutual Aid

The President said the term "mutual aid" should be used, rather than "foreign aid," since, he said, the interests of the recipient countries were synonymous with those of the United States. American aid helped to defend the peace and independence of all.

Eisenhower said that some economies might possibly be made in the military field. But he said that if real cuts in the budget were desired, they should be made in all fields, such as the Post Office and other departments, and not just in the military field.

He said that the vital interests of the country, United Press, Reuter and France-Press.

Amman, Mar. 27.
Bahgat Al Tahluni, chief of Jordan's Royal Cabinet, left for Damascus today with a special message for Syrian President Shukri El Kuwaili from King Hussein of Jordan.

Tahluni refused to disclose the contents of the message but said he might return either tonight or tomorrow.

Premier Suleiman Nabulsi conferred for 40 minutes with the King last night—United Press.

MOLLET WANTS VOTE OF CONFIDENCE ON HIS GENERAL POLICY

Paris, Mar. 27.
FRENCH Premier Guy Mollet tonight asked for a vote of confidence during the National Assembly debate on general policy. The vote will be taken tomorrow evening.

Mollet asked for the confidence vote after speaking for over an hour. He reviewed the Government's policy dealing with constitutional reform, the country's economic and financial situation, the Algerian problem, French relations with Morocco and Tunisia and prospects for Europe.

Mollet said he favoured a reform of the constitution. On the economic question, he called for a greater export drive to permit the import of raw materials and sources of energy.

The Premier re-stated the principles on which the future of Algeria should be based and said the Government's unconditional ceasefire to the rebels still held good. The ceasefire would be followed by free elections and France would then negotiate the future of Algeria with the real spokesmen of the Algerian population.

Turning to Morocco and Tunisia, Mollet said France had granted these countries their independence. France would respect their sovereignty, and

HUNT GOES ON IN CYPRUS FOR GRIVAS

Nicosia, Mar. 27.
An official communique tonight said that two suspected extremists were captured in the Troodos Mountain area where Greek Cypriot underground "General" George Grivas is reported trapped.

The identity of the men captured was not announced.

The communique said only that two suspected "terrorists" had been captured after an exchange of shots when they failed to halt.

Three thousand British troops have drawn a circle around a 40-mile area in the snow-capped Troodos Mountains west of here where the elusive Grivas was reported holed up with a guerrilla band.

'Don't Move'

No further details of today's operation were released.

British patrols were under orders during the night to halt and take ambush positions. They were instructed "don't move even if you shoot someone—leave the body until daylight."

This was to avoid British casualties in the now densely patrolled mountain region.

Helicopters ranged over the search area during the day.

Meanwhile, Dr Fazil Kutchuk, leader of the Turkish minority in Cyprus, today called British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan expressing "anxiety" that negotiations would begin again with Greek Cypriot Archbishop Makarios.

Alleged Complicity

Makarios was exiled to the lonely Seychelles Islands in the Indian Ocean last March for alleged complicity with the EOKA organisation.

Last week, the British Government announced it would release Makarios if he gave unconditional approval of violence on Cyprus.

Kutchuk called Macmillan: "The possibility of Britain conferring with Makarios is causing anxiety among law-abiding Cypriots, especially the Turks. We trust that Britain is not yielding to unreasonable pressures. Britain should be steadfast in its policy for settling the Cyprus question through tri-partite talks and refuse to talk to Makarios who deserves a speedy trial and exemplary punishment. Discussions with Makarios will undermine Turkish trust in British justice."—United Press.

Ike Not Alarmed About Aqaba

Washington, Mar. 27.
President Eisenhower stated at his press conference today that he attached no particular significance to reports of projected troop movements by Saudi Arabia on the shores of the Gulf of Aqaba.

He had been asked whether he thought these movements would imply a threat for freedom of shipping in the Gulf.

Asked about recent frontier skirmishes between Israel and Syria, the President indicated that he thought these incidents were a continuation of the long series of Palestine frontier disorders.

Such incidents stemmed from the war of nerves existing between Israel and her Arab neighbours, he said.—France-Press.

Gatt Meeting To Discuss Common Market

Geneva, Mar. 27.
The Inter-Regional Committee of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (Gatt) will meet here on April 24 to discuss procedures to be followed for later consideration of the European common market treaty in plenary session. It was announced today.

Usually well-informed sources indicated that some nations, notably the United States and Canada, were anxious to see the treaty ratified by the parliaments of the treaty nations before it encounters possible objections on the grounds of incompatibility with Gatt provisions.

The six nations—France, Italy, Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg and Holland—already have a waiver from certain Gatt obligations to allow the European coal-steel pool to operate, but the common market poses far more intricate problems, including preferential treatment for colonial territories.—China Mail Special.

NEW PIPELINE PROJECTS WILL AFFECT EGYPTIAN REVENUE

Paris, Mar. 27.

M. Christian Pineau, French Foreign Minister, told the National Assembly today the French Government had informed its allies that it could not accept Egypt's claims to receive all the Suez Canal dues.

France, he said, considered the position of Mr Dag Hammarskjold, United Nations Secretary-General, contradictory and unacceptable. His mission to Cairo was regarded by France as "purely a mission of information."

NEW RUSSIAN CLAIM

BIGGEST IRON-ORE DEPOSITS

Moscow, Mar. 27. The Soviet Union today claimed to have discovered the world's biggest iron-ore deposits near the great Siberian river Ob, north of Tomsk.

These said the deposits contain "tens of thousands of millions of tons of ore." They are bigger than the deposits in the United States near Lake Superior, which at 23,000 million tons were hitherto considered the biggest, it said.

Concentration of iron in the newly found Soviet ore varied between 12 and 36 per cent, in some places as much as 40 per cent. This compared with 32 per cent in the biggest European deposits in Alsace-Lorraine and 27 per cent in Lake Superior, Tass said.—Reuter.

Plane Drops Leaflets

Damascus, Mar. 27. An unknown plane dropped provocative leaflets on Syrian territory last night, Damascus radio reported today.

The radio said the plane dropped leaflets on towns and villages of the Druze Mountains "provoking sectarian differences." "Those who sent the plane, whether Zionists or not, were thinking that they can split the country. But this is illusion," the broadcast said.—United Press.

CHINESE, CZECH ACCORD

Tokyo, Mar. 28.

China and Czechoslovakia on Wednesday signed a treaty of friendship and co-operation calling for unity on international problems and "mutual economic assistance and co-operation."

The treaty, signed by Premier Chou En-lai and Czech Premier Vilem Siroky, comes near the end of a wide "goodwill" tour of China and other Asian Communist states by the Czech leader.

Radio Peking, which reported the signing today, said that the treaty "provides that both parties undertake to participate in all activities aimed at world peace and security and in conformity with the principles of the United Nations."

Along with the signing of the treaty, the Chinese and Czech Governments issued a joint statement calling for "unity among Socialists (Communists) and with all national, democratic and other peace-loving nations, against all possible imperialist plots."

The main points of the joint statement were:

- ★ Opposition to West German rearmament, especially if it involved atomic weapons, and the appointment of "ex-Hitlerite generals to NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) posts."
- ★ Agreement between the two nations that the newly created European "common market" and "Euratom" were "exclusive organizations sponsored by NATO and support for the Soviet view that in its place an all-European organization" should be created in both fields.

★ Support for the Warsaw Pact "as a self-defence organization" though both governments wished to see both NATO and the Warsaw Pact replaced by a collective security system for all Europe.

★ Condemning of the "Eisenhower doctrine" as new American colonialism which had become a major threat to the sovereignty and independence of the Middle and Near Eastern countries.

★ Support for both North Korea and North Vietnam "in their efforts to unify their countries."

★ Welcoming of the establishment of diplomatic relations between Czechoslovakia and Japan.

★ A call for halting nuclear weapons tests as a first step towards total banning of atomic weapons.

The radio reported that similar agreements on cultural co-operation and co-operation in the field of health were also signed by the two nations on Wednesday afternoon.—United Press.

Manhunt In Mountains

Algiers, Mar. 27. French paratroops attacked Nationalist rebels entrenched in the crags of the Quanten mountains of West Algeria today and in a running battle shot down 24 insurgents.

The manhunt across the 2,400-foot plateau was part of a six-day flareup in military activity in all sectors. French troops reported they have slain 70 rebels and captured at least 100 more.—United Press.

UNEF DECIDING FACTOR 'ASSURING PEACEFUL CONDITIONS'

United Nations, Mar. 27. UNITED NATIONS Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold, said in a message to members of the United Nations Emergency Force that "the force and its mission have been a decisive factor in the effort of the community of nations towards securing peaceful conditions" in the Middle East.

To Burns

Hammarskjold's message, the text of which was published at United Nations headquarters today, was addressed from Cairo to Major-General Edson Burns, Commander of the U.N. Force.

The success of the U.N. Force in its important task will help to lay the foundations for future efforts to strengthen the force.

of peace," Hammarskjold said. He expressed regret at not having had the time to visit General Burns' headquarters during his trip to Egypt, which was devoted almost entirely to diplomatic conversations.

Hammarskjold said he was aware of the numerous practical and psychological difficulties which the U.N. Force had had to overcome, and he congratulated the officers and men on their contribution to the restoration and maintenance of peaceful conditions in the area.

However, Brazil's Foreign Minister told United Press today the Government was considering withdrawing its contingent from the police force in case of an outbreak of hostilities in the region.

Jose Carlos de Macedo Soares denied, however, that any decision on this matter was imminent. He said Brazil was consulting with Canada, Denmark, Norway and other countries with troops in the force.

He said the U.N. Force was before President Juscelino Kubitschek and the War Ministry as well as his own department but it was principally his responsibility.

Patrol Purposes

Some Nationalist groups have been demanding withdrawal of the troops since congressional authorization was only for patrol purposes in the Middle East. They were not sent there to fight, it has been maintained.—France-Press and United Press.

Soviet Disarmament Proposal To Be Discussed

London, Mar. 27.

The Western members of the five-power United Nations Sub-Committee on Disarmament were stated in conference circles here today to have accepted a Soviet proposal to discuss immediately nuclear tests.

Ike's Envoy Arrives In Pakistan

Karachi, Mar. 27.

President Eisenhower's special envoy, arrived here today by air from Tehran on a three-day visit to explain the President's plan for the Middle East to leaders of the Pakistani Government.

In a prepared statement issued to the press on arrival, Mr Richards said: "I am looking forward to the opportunity of meeting your President and Prime Minister to express to them the purpose and spirit of our President's programme for co-operation with nations in the general area of the Middle East."

"We have got a staunch ally and friend in Pakistan and I intend to be here," he said.—Reuter.

$100,000 Pearl Crown For Cherry Queen

Washington, Mar. 27. A $100,000 pearl crown to be worn by the "Cherry Blossom Queen" will be presented at this year's cherry blossom festival.

The crown, the gift of Yoshitaka Mikimoto, known as the "world's pearl king," will be presented by Japanese Ambassador Masuyuki Tanii during the ball at which the Cherry Blossom Queen is chosen.

Mrs Eisenhower is expected to spin the "wheel of fortune" which picks the queen from all the state princesses.—United Press.

Bata Withdraws Nobel Prize Candidature

The Hague, Mar. 27. Former Czech shoe king Jan Bata, stated today that he has withdrawn his candidature for the Nobel Peace Prize for 1957 in favour of Brazilian General Mario Candido Mendes.

Bata, who is at present in the Netherlands, said he had sent a telegram to this effect to Gunnar Jahn, Chairman of the Nobel Committee. Bata's candidature was proposed because of his work in Brazil on behalf of refugees from Eastern European countries.

General Jahn, who is 82, was one of the pioneers of the work of pacification and protection of Brazil's native tribes.—United Press.

Laos Drops Reparations Claims Against Japs

Tokyo, Mar. 27.

Laos formally relinquished World War II reparations claims against Japan but asked for Japanese economic assistance.

Laotian Ambassador to Japan Prince Tyao Khammavong met with Japanese Vice-Foreign Minister Katsumichi Ohno and relayed his government's decision not to demand war reparations from Japan.

The Laotian envoy, however, said his country hoped Japan could extend aid toward Laotian economic development.

Ohno promised that the Japanese Government would study in what way it could help Laos economically.—United Press.

Adenauer Visiting Iran

Rome, Mar. 27.

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, left Rome by air today for Tehran at the invitation of the Shah of Iran, Reza Pahlavi.

Adenauer, who had come to Rome to sign the Euratom and European common market treaties, was accompanied by his son, Konrad Adenauer and his daughter, Frau Liebeth Werah.—France-Press.

A And H Bomb Tests GERMAN URGES SUPPORT FOR JAPAN

Munich, Mar. 27.

Herr Herbert Wehner, a leading foreign policy expert of the West German Social Democratic opposition Party, said here tonight that Japan must be supported everywhere in her opposition to atomic and hydrogen bomb weapons.

Recognition Of China Necessary

New Delhi, Mar. 27.

The Prime Minister, Mr Nehru, said today the five principles of coexistence, though a good code for international behaviour, were being used for wrong purposes and had become "hackneyed and debased."

Mr Nehru, who was opening a one-day foreign affairs debate in the Council of States, said the only hope for the world was peaceful coexistence and prevention of aggression.

Peace was a fine word but it was being used for all purposes, Security was another good word, but for the sake of security armed alliances were made.

DEBASE WORDS

"Thus we debase our fine words or phrases—then we have to search for some new words which might not have been so debased," he said.

Referring to international affairs, Mr Nehru said he hoped other countries would view the recognition of China "from a strictly practical point of view."

If China, with its vast population, was ignored by the United Nations, any steps taken by that body would not be effective.

FRENCH VIEW

In Paris two French Deputies, both Socialists, have urged that France recognize China, in a debate in the National Assembly today on foreign policy.

Jean Bouhey also recommended the admission of China into the United Nations. He urged close contact with our Western friends and with NATO, and also a persistent effort to lift the barriers now cutting the European continent in two.

Arthur Conte declared: "Let us know how to exercise our mission everywhere, in Asia as in the Middle East, and even in China, with its thousand years old civilization, which is to be called upon to play a great role in the world of tomorrow and whose government we have delayed too long in recognizing."—Reuter & France-Press.

INTERESTS OF ALL

Rather would it help to urge on both world powers the necessity of an agreement, which was in the interests of all humanity.

The press service of the Social Democratic Party said Britain was not letting herself be dissuaded from becoming the third atomic power.

"The delivery of American remote-controlled weapons agreed upon in Bermuda does not seem to satisfy her ambition."

"She is engaged on producing hydrogen bombs independent of the United States."

"Confirmation that she is not at a disadvantage in the race to produce the most terrible weapons of destruction may mean triumph for British science and technique, but for the world it opens up the grim prospect of an atomic arms race."

POLISH-INDIAN VIEW

In New Delhi, Mr Nehru and the Polish Prime Minister, Mr Jozef Cyrankiewicz, today called for the immediate abandonment of nuclear and thermonuclear test explosions in a joint statement issued at the end of their talks here.

The statement said: "The Prime Minister earnestly hopes that the Disarmament Commission and its sub-committee will seek to enlarge the area of agreement among the big powers on the limitation of armaments and the abandonment of weapons of mass destruction."

"As a first step there should be some reduction of armaments without delay" with agreed measures of inspection and control as well as prohibition of nuclear and thermonuclear weapons.

The Prime Ministers also consider that as an immediate step, nuclear and thermonuclear test explosions should be abandoned as their very continuance involves ever increasing danger to all forms of life with incalculable consequences to the future of mankind and civilization."

UK RESOLUTION

In London a resolution, urging the Government to abandon the proposed nuclear explosion on Christmas Island, and to devote its research to the peaceful use of nuclear energy, was passed in Bristol by the Free Church National Council National Congress.

The resolution was carried after Professor C. A. Coulson, Professor of Applied Mathematics at Oxford University, said that if no more tests took place by 1970, we should have already reached a level of danger as dangerous as the steady falling of radioactive dust on the earth.

Nobody would know in the future whether they were the victims of the plans which Russia, Britain and America were now making, but there could be no doubt that some lives would be destroyed, and the more bombs, the more lives.

QUESTION IN SINGAPORE

In Singapore, Mr David Marshall, former Chief Minister, who resigned last year, gave notice today of two questions he will ask in the Legislative Assembly here on Britain's hydrogen bomb tests.

He will ask at the April 22 sitting whether the Singapore Government has been consulted by Britain or made representations about the nuclear test on the mid-Pacific power island.

Mr Marshall, now a Labour backbencher, will also ask the Minister for Health whether he will make a statement on the "possible effect" of the hydrogen bomb tests on Singapore's health and food supply.—Reuter & France-Press.

DON IDDON'S DIARY

BOUQUETS FOR BRITAIN

There's anger here — and disappointment. The headlines read, "Nasser Moving to Take Over Gaza." The Americans reading them are disillusioned.

They had hoped that the Middle East crisis was over. They had been told that so many times — by their President, who said it before the election, during the election, and after the election — and by their Secretary of State, who confided to his friends: "I can handle Nasser. He will see reason."

The State Department has blamed the British, the French, and Israelis for months for the mess in Suez. Spokesman after spokesman has said, "The Canal would never have been closed if the British had not attacked." But now even the State Department has changed its tune.

Today the spokesmen are tongue-tied or else they are saying: "It is a delicate situation. We are studying it."

But this is only one reason why British prestige is going up here like a rocket.

Here is Vice-President Richard Nixon, the most powerful man in the United States after Mr. Eisenhower, saying in Uganda: "I am deeply impressed by the way the British have trained the Africans to self-government."

A glimpse

It was Mr. Nixon who, when the U.S. cast its vote condemning the British and French action in Egypt, said: "This is a declaration of independence from colonialism."

But the Vice-President is touring Africa and has caught a glimpse of British political genius. There was a time, a few days ago, when the bemused American newspaper reader and radio listener thought that the U.S. had freed the Gold Coast and made it into a new independent Ghana.

The dispatches were all about Kwame Nkrumah and Richard Nixon. Americans, looking for a mention of the Duchess of Kent of whom they are fond, could hardly find one. How ever the mistake has been rectified and today the British are getting full credit, and even a photograph of the Duchess has managed to sneak into print.

Well ahead

ON top of the Ghana achievement has come the announcement of Britain's decision to triple her nuclear power programme putting her three years ahead of the rest of the world in the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes.

The New York Times solemnly concedes: "We shall have to take into account the fact that if the British programme is accomplished on schedule Britain is likely to have world leadership in atomic power, know-how, and experience."

And crowding the atomic announcement are a series of articles and telecasts analysing Britain today after Suez.

Do such distinguished American commentators and correspondents as Edward R. Murrow and Drew Middleton say we are flagging, lethargic, second-rate members of a second-rate Power?

They say just the opposite.

"Technological, commercial, and political skills are to win new eminence for her in the nuclear age. Aggressive confidence, based on evidence of solid progress. This is not a moribund society living in the aftermath of past glories. It is a society in motion. . . . Britain is a country that still believes in itself."

Riding high

SO rejoice on this eve of spring. The people who were saying that Britain was no longer a Great Power was sliding fast to a position of minor importance and negligible influence, are now proclaiming for all the New World to hear that we ride high and mighty.

Star witnesses

THE results of the State investigation in Hollywood into scandal magazines and the private eye business has now been passed on to the Grand Jury for action. We are promised a parade of star witnesses certainly Frank Sinatra and possibly Marilyn Monroe.

The reason why plans to make Separate Tables with Sir Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, Deborah Kerr, and Burt Lancaster collapsed was because Olivier wanted to make drastic changes in Terence Rattigan's script and in the characterisations. Olivier also thought Miss Kerr was making a mistake in agreeing to appear.

The Duke of Windsor has ordered eight seats for the opening of "The First Gentleman," a play about England's Prince Regent, later George IV. The Duke is a descendant of the famous dandy.

A PRISON OF NATIONS

"HOIST!" — THE INSOLUBLE PROBLEM OF RELAXING A RULE BUILT ON BLOOD AND TERROR

J. E. M. Arden

RECENT events have thrown into prominence the question of the Communist attitude to nationalism and the rights of nations.

It has long been the Communist claim that their system has produced a settlement of all questions connected with nationhood satisfactory to the aspirations of all the peoples concerned. The leading Communist countries have put themselves forward in the United Nations and elsewhere as defenders of the rights of small nations throughout the world.

The last few months, however, have seen the suppression of a virtually unanimous people's rising by Soviet armed force. And at the Supreme Soviet session in February, 1957, a further reminder was given about Soviet practices in this matter. A decree was passed announcing that remnants of a number of nations deported en masse from the Caucasus in Stalin's time would be allowed to return home.

The nations concerned are the Buddhist Kalmyks and the Muslim Chechens, Ingush, Karachai and Balkars, inhabitants of part of the Sovietised section of the Middle East. The restoration of the autonomous institutions (which were earlier such small protection to them) is not, indeed, complete.

Of the four "Autonomous Republics" suppressed, only one — the Chechen-Ingush — is to be

Slaughter

and Suffering

The probable explanation is that in the slaughter and suffering they are known to have passed through, these peoples have declined so greatly in numbers that their populations no longer rate the higher status. It has, in any case, been announced that shortage of houses will prevent rapid resettlement — which seems to mean that the old towns of these peoples, now occupied by Russians and given Russian names, will not be restored to them. It is officially announced, in fact, that the economic interests of the Russian settlers are not to be interfered with.

These nations had been penalised on account of alleged collaboration with the Germans. The new decree points out that it is un-Leninist to blame entire nations for what can only have been the actions of some of them. But it cannot be pretended that these deportations were crimes of Stalin kept secret from his successors and revealed to them after his death, to their shocked surprise, like the other matters about which Khrushchev took the dead dictator to task in his "secret speech" in February, 1956.

The facts of the deportations were known to the present leadership. The announcement of the largest one had been made in the Soviet Press. And the present head of the Security Police — Serov — actually carried them out.

If it is only four years after Stalin's death that the action presents itself to his successors as un-Leninist, we may perhaps seek other motives than purely doctrinal ones in this welcome restoration — particularly as two of the main nations deported are not rehabilitated.

The original purpose of the deportations was partly penal and partly "strategic." Vlasov's Handbook of Administrative Law, published in Moscow in 1946, gives the purpose of "resettlement" carried out by "the organs of State security" as "State security and defence of State frontiers."

Civilian

Strategist

During the Second World War, the Germans had reached, or nearly reached, the North Caucasian peoples. They were only a few hundred miles from the Turkish frontier — a position which might perhaps have impressed a civilian strategist like Stalin as dangerous, though, in fact, the area is practically inaccessible, and now that Soviet generals have such great influence in the councils of the Party, the strategic argument would presumably carry less weight.

To add to the argument — the generals never realised the fact that the present security chief,

Serov, was awarded the "Order of Suvorov" — officially reserved for major victories in the field — for these very deportation operations.

Perhaps the strategic argument is the reason why the Crimean Tatars are omitted from this restoration of rights.

The Crimea is not an inaccessible area. Apart from its general strategic importance, proved in several wars, it borders on open sea, south of which lies the State to which the Tatars have always felt the strongest linguistic and natural ties — Turkey.

The Crimea is also very much a personal fief of Khrushchev's, who transferred it from Russia to his own stronghold of the Ukraine in 1954. Here Leninism seems compatible with mass deportation.

A further point presents itself. These peoples lived in the remotest valleys of the Northern Caucasus completely cut off from any foreign influence. They were enjoying, if the Soviet theory is accepted, the most satisfying forms of national autonomy — indeed they had voted over 99 percent for the regime in the previous elections. If the Soviet solution of the nationality problem was really so satisfactory, how did it come about that these peoples rejected it even to the extent of collaborating with the Nazis, of whom they know nothing except the hostile accounts given them by the Soviet Press? Yet this "autonomy," which they found so intolerable, is all that is to be restored to them, politically speaking. It is certainly a great improvement that they are no longer to be pariahs, and that they are to return to their ancestral lands. But this is not to give them even a trace of the independence for which the Asian peoples inside and outside the USSR equally long.

Extreme

Oppressions

One of the more extreme oppressions of the Soviet Middle East is to be partially rectified. But as before (and as in Hungary), the peoples of the whole area will remain subject to the absolute fiat of the Moscow Party-Creatures. And it will again be said to be all that they could possibly desire. The old Tsarist Empire was called "a prison of nations." The USSR has painted the cells in more attractive colours. But its treatment of unruly prisoners has been more brutal.

"An artist determined, as I was determined, to reach the heights, can do so only by giving his whole mind and heart to the task," Lee says. "To marry is to divide — wasn't it Caesar who said, 'Divide, and conquer'? He was talking about the enemy! Divide, and be conquered should be the warning to an artist. Singleness of purpose, singleness of heart, are essential to success."

THE LIBERACE STORY

by
Anton burney

"I have known many of the world's most beautiful women — and they were women not of beauty only, but of rare talent and personality, such as any man might dream of sharing his life and hopes with. It has often been an effort to look away, and to remember that such rich delight is not for me — not yet. After the toll, the rest; after the conquest, the reward. I have had the fortune to reach the goal I set myself, and now, perhaps soon — I shall think of marriage. It must be a marriage of true minds, as Shakespeare says. She will need to give me great charity, great sympathy, and great love; and I shall give her something of that devotion I have given for over thirty years to the exacting mistress, Music. It is natural that too many marry in haste. I want for both our sakes to avoid that mistake."

Nearly forty thousand English pounds would have been needed to build Lee's house, if it had been set in England's green and pleasant land. In the very pleasant and green land of the United States it cost a hundred thousand American dollars: money well spent, for it is the business of the rich to circulate their money and not to hoard it. Many a technician and artisan in San Francisco sat down to a better Christmas dinner that year for having a share in this great building project. The last thing to be done was the big swimming pool, shaped like a grand piano and with a joy-board terrace at the shallow end. This was the last Liberace signature on a house already full of the musical motifs he had chosen for himself. A magnificent pool — for which he had waited over since he learned to swim at the age of two — when he could hardly play a note on the piano! When Lee plays a concert he always uses a Baldwin piano made by the great American firm of instrument makers, and for this reason most of his long hours of practising at home are spent with a Baldwin. But it's a very special one, worth about $5,000, which the manufacturers have given to him. As they have specified that they do not want it back for a hundred years it is possible that by the time they see it again it may be beginning to show signs of wear — at the moment it's getting about twenty hours' hard use every week. "Of course," Lee jokes, "I may not practise quite so hard when I'm a hundred and thirty!"

His other piano is unique. It's a Blüthner, valued at $20,000, which was one of a pair built by the famous German firm some years before the war. Its fellow was destroyed in the bombing of Leipzig. The piano is a concert grand, over ten feet long, in black picked out with real gold and with powder-blue felt inside. Sometimes Lee will play for a small circle of intimate friends on this dream instrument, and on these occasions when the lights are dim and there is "no forty-million audience" crowding the air, Lee will abandon himself to the love, the sadness, and the softness of the heart-breaking melodies of old German and Polish, especially for Chopin. These are concerts the world cannot share, but I believe the refreshment they give to the player's spirit enriches his audience on the air when he returns to the concert platform or the studio.

Lee's bedroom is dominated by a huge bed, which someone once likened to a football field. "I like walking in my sleep with one foot in bed," is Lee's explanation of this over-size couch. He also says he's so tired sometimes after hours of practising that he's almost asleep before he gets to his room and he can go to bed with his eyes shut because it's impossible to miss the bed! This monster is covered by day with a white bedspread decorated with black and gold, and is heaped with cushions of the same style. The bedroom is decorated in eclecticism, with black and gold touches, and is equipped with a cunning sound diffusion unit, so that when Lee operates his bedside turntable the music from his chosen record comes into the room from concealed speakers in the walls. Also by Lee's bedside is a very up-to-date intercom system by which he can speak to his mother or, then, guests in other rooms. And of course, a bookcase is within reach, for Lee loves to read in bed — sometimes the latest popular novel, and sometimes a weighty work of musical theory, or a biography. At times, though he is too busy to find much time for it, Lee is himself a writer. He has sponsored and supervised a new work on music teaching which is expected to revolutionise teaching techniques in America, and he is engaged on a serious history of Candelabra, which will be the fullest and most authoritative ever issued on this subject. Lee's well-known interest in candelabra stems from his first sight of the lovely Chopin film, A Song to Remember, in which one stood on the composer's piano. Now Lee always has candelabra on his piano when he plays!

To walk round this magnificent home is to understand what great wealth can do to make a man's life comfortable. But let no man envy Liberace. He has become rich not by exploitation, not by amazing great profits from the sale of bread, not by speculating in other men's lives and souls, but by bringing innocent pleasure to the millions. No money was ever better earned, or more justifiably spent. Nor is it spent on personal comfort alone.

When Lee's house was being built, his contractor, William Stekhal, was suddenly struck down by polio. The young builder was doing his biggest job with the Liberace house, and part of his bitter disappointment lay in leaving the work incomplete while he was in hospital. The work went on, and was finished, but Bill Stekhal has never seen it. Not yet, but he will. For Lee's understanding friendship has gone far to conquer the ravages of the disease. In Stekhal's case, and there is hope of a cure. It was this illness, not his friend's that brought polio closely home to Lee, and was instrumental in causing him to establish one of the great enterprises of his — The Liberace Foundation to fight polio. He and George began modestly enough with the purchase and gift to the Rancho Los Amigos Hospital of an electro-encephalograph (which is an instrument used in diagnosis of polio) which cost about five thousand dollars. Modestly — for five thousand dollars is a small fortune. Yes, Lee says, "but for such an evil as polio there can be neither charity nor mercy. This obscene horror must be stamped out from the living bodies it feeds on, and the world made clean of it. For my part, I shall never cease from this work so long as it remains to be done. And I think the thousands of people who have helped by adding their contributions to mine. Every year more and more formerly incurable people are going back to a normal life. And I pray my friend Bill Stekhal will soon be among them. That would indeed be a great reward."

Let those who envy success consider: if they would make so gracious a use of it, if it came their way. *Because the raised top cut off his view of the garden, he had a sheet of plexiglass specially made and designed. MORE TOMORROW

STRIKING DECISION BY MCC

BONUS POINTS TO BE AWARDED FOR FAST SCORING THIS SUMMER

London, Mar. 27. Bonus points are to be awarded for fast scoring in the first innings of English Championship matches this summer. This was the most striking decision to be taken by the Advisory County Cricket Committee when they met at Lords today to discuss the recommendations of the special Welfare Committee on the future of the game.

Other important decisions were announced, including: The rejection of the controversial proposal to limit first innings to 85 overs; approval of the limitation of leg-side fielders to five; new powers for umpires to stop time wasting and the standardisation of boundaries at a maximum of 75 yards.

The proposal to restrict leg-side fielders to five was carried, with not more than two to be behind the popping crease at the moment of the bowler's delivery. The original proposal specified "not more than two behind the wicket".

The standardisation of boundaries to 75 yards in any direction from the centre of the pitch met with general approval.

Although from 1952, counties will be limited to two first-class overseas players, this will not mean established overseas players having to stop first-class cricket here. A proviso has been added that players with existing contracts should be allowed to continue after 1952.

Another attempt was made to revive the pre-1937 l.b.w. law, under which a batsman could be out only to a ball pitched between wicket and wicket, but this did not succeed.

HOW IT WILL WORK

The "bonus" plan will work as follows:

A side winning the match and having gained two bonus points for scoring faster while gaining first innings lead to receive 14 points.

A side leading on the first innings in which it has scored the faster and wins the match, 12 points.

A side leading on the first innings in which it has scored the faster and loses the match or draws—four points.

A side leading on the first in-

Sir Len Comments On Bonus Plan

London, Mar. 27. Sir Len Hutton, the former England captain and Yorkshire opening batsman, commenting on the Advisory Committee's decision, said: "I cannot see that the 'bonus' plan will make any difference. In fact it is possibly going to make the game harder to play."

"Figures are being brought into it and the tendency will be for the bowlers to bowl tighter. There is little wrong with the game. I only wish they would get rid of this wretched l.b.w. law. Then we should begin to make some strides in the right direction."

"Ultimately, I am sure it will have to go, at any rate, in England. People will always come and see batsmen making runs, but under the present system, the batsmen have to concentrate, concentrate and still concentrate. In the end they just get worn out."—France-Press.

nings but losing or drawing the match, two points.

The recommendation giving more power to umpires to stop time wasting was adopted without alteration.

A proposal by Sussex to limit the length of a bowler's run was defeated. The strongest point made by the committee was that, in the event of a bowler taking unnecessarily long to bowl an over, the umpire, after a caution, would have power to request the captain to take off the bowler.

He would not then be allowed to bowl again in the same innings.

One of the most controversial "reforms" recently proposed by the MCC, the limitation of over to 85, was turned down by the club.

ANOTHER AMENDMENT

Mr. S. C. Grimth, MCC assistant secretary, said, concerning the 85 overs proposal, that a suggestion to increase this to 90 overs met with support, but eventually an alternative put forward by Middlesex was adopted. This provided that first innings points should be reduced from four to two, and if the side which led had scored the faster, calculated on runs per over, they should gain another four points, to be retained whatever the final result of the match. Another amendment reduced the "bonus" points from 4 to 2 and this was carried.

A survey proposal, with a bearing on the conduct of the game, was adopted in principle. This urged that counties should draw the attention of their players in an emphatic manner to the concern felt about defensive tactics. In addition, they felt that the fundamental cause of this dull play lay not in the game but in the approach by many players, and in particular the captains.

The proposed knockout competition is to be deferred for further consideration by a later meeting of the sub-committee which prepared the scheme. A lot of snags arose and counties wanted more information of the subject.

The next meeting of the full MCC committee is on April 4, when today's decisions are expected to be ratified.—France-Press.

LOOKING AT SPORT

Dai Dower Seeks To Wrest World Title From Pascual Perez

By DENNIS HART

In the next couple of days two little men will settle an argument in the centre of a vast soccer stadium in the Argentine; two others will perform a similar ceremony at an ice rink in Nottingham; a couple more, plus sixteen heavyweights, will do battle over a stretch of the river Thames between a bridge and a brewery.

All in the cause of sport. And what ructions some of these activities have already caused.

In Argentina's soccer stadium on March 30 one of the miniature gladiators will be Dai Dower, erstwhile hewer of coal, now Lance Corporal Dower of the Welsh Regiment, and Flyweight Champion of the British Empire.

Dower seeks to wrest the world title from Pascual Perez, Perez is the local boy and, naturally, worthy South American reaction that Dower has not much chance of winning.

Strange to report this goes for British fight fans, too. Even for Welsh ones.

Most, in fact, declare that so doomed is the Dower mission that he has no right to be the cause of Britain's name being dragged once more through the boxing mud.

Has Dower a chance, and if not should he be allowed to fight Perez?

YES AND NO

Yes and no, or rather no and yes.

Even at his best I do not think that Dower would beat Perez. The Welshman's limitations in dealing with a hard-hitting fighter who comes forward were severely shown up in the mauling he got from Young Marlin of Spain.

Now, after an eight month lay-off from the ring, Dower can hardly be in top form.

But this is not Dower's fault. He just has not been able to get his boxing in in such a precarious position in Britain that promoters will not invest much money in fighters who are not guaranteed box office attractions—and that includes flyweights.

So Dower has been an unwilling non-fighting champion. And mention that Dower could bide his time, get the fight and then go for a crack at the world crown and you will be met with a sarcastic laugh from manager Nat Seller.

A boxer has to grab his chance when it comes. If he waits the chance may never come again.

If the odds against Dower beating Perez are heavy, the odds against him getting another world title chance are heavier.

From boxing at a football ground we turn to boxing in an ice rink.

At the Nottingham rink on April 1 Nigeria's Hogan Bassy defeats his Empire featherweight title against Percy Lewis, who hails from Trinidad.

MUST NOT LOSE

This is a fight Bassy must not lose. After two years in the top class he has finally been recognised as a contender for the world crown. Defeat by Lewis would put Bassy out of the reckoning.

This should not happen. Bassy has beaten Lewis once, although by a fractional points margin. And as a combination of boxer-fighter-puncher he has few equals in the world.

But he does not like fighting southpaws, and in his anxiety to prove his world class Bassy may lose some of his poise.

So I think it will be a tougher thing than many imagine.

Yes for sensationalism even boxing is being hard put to keep pace with this year's 'Varsity Boat Race, to be rowed on March 30.

Yes, that annual contest between the gentlemen of Oxford and Cambridge, the event popularly known as the last remaining truly amateur event in the sporting calendar.

This year Oxford have attacked the project with the toughness of a professional pugilist. Led by president Carnegie—an Australian—they have adopted a new rowing style. This is a short, punchy action as opposed to the classic flowing rhythm which is so typically English and so typically Cambridge.

IN FULL FLOW

There is no more graceful sight than a Cambridge eight in full flow. But this case and grace has got Britain exactly nowhere in world rowing in recent years. Maybe the rugged approach will get results.

That is what Oxford think. And rather than get into their stride on a small quiet stretch of river Oxford have done nearly all training on the boisterous Thames tideway on which the race itself will be rowed.

There has been one difference. During the race the river will be cleared. Oxford have cheerfully competed with the tugs, barges and lighters that go to make up the busiest stretch of waterway in the world. And they have done it for hours on end. It's the old Zulu theory of putting so much into training that the race itself seems almost easy by comparison.

Don't be surprised if Oxford's results are almost as staggering as those of the fanatical Czechs.—(London Express Service).

IAAF Issues List Of 83 New World Records

London, Mar. 27. The International Amateur Athletic Federation today issued a list of 83 world track and field records, set between January 1, 1956, and March 15, 1957, and now accepted by the International body.

Sixty of the marks were made by men athletes and 23 by women. Eight of the records were made at the Melbourne Olympics in November.

Thirty of the men's marks and one of the women's are credited to United States athletes.

The Soviet Union claims nine of the men's and nine of the women's records.—United Press.

WORLD FLYWEIGHT TITLE FIGHT AT BUENOS AIRES ON MARCH 31

Paris, Mar. 27. Some 7,000 miles, 88 hours and a six pound weight difference separate two world boxing title fights to be held at the end of this month and at the beginning of April.

Argentine's World Flyweight Champion, Pascual Perez defends his crown against Dai Dower, the British and Empire Flyweight Champion at Buenos Aires on March 31.

On April 1, in Paris, at the Palais des Sports, Italy's deaf and dumb World Bantamweight Champion, Mario D'Agata defends his title against Alphonse Halimi, the French challenger.

D'Agata, who arrives here on March 28 after training at the North Italian village of Comerio, puts his title at stake for the first time. He took it from a Frenchman—Robert Cohen—at Rome's Olympic Stadium on June 29 last year, when the two force stopped the fight in the seventh round.

This will be the first world boxing title fight in the French capital for 20 years, since France's Marcel Thil retained his World Middleweight title against Canada's Lou Brouillard on February 15, 1937.

MILITARY SERVICE

America's Percy Bessal defeated France's European Featherweight Champion, Ray Farnham, for the Interim World Featherweight title here on February 9, 1953, whilst Sandy Saddler, the reigning Champion, was on military service in the United States Army.

Both D'Agata and Halimi have been training up to the hill for next Monday's fight. D'Agata is the bantamweight version of Jake La Motta, the Italian-American former World Middleweight Champion.

Six years older than his 25-year-old challenger, the Italian Champion is slow for a bantamweight, but has a punch like the kick of a donkey. He hands out solid punishment, but can take solid punishment. In his 51 professional fights he has never been sent to the canvas and in return has wrapped up 22 fights before the limit. He has won 23 fights on points, had three drawn fights and lost three.

Italy's Kid Arzuff, at 1951 and one to Robert Cohen in 1954.

Undeclared in his 18 fights, hard hitting Halimi scored first round knockouts against his first five opponents. He has won 11 of his fights before the limit.

LETHAL COMBINATION

Faster than his opponent, the French challenger counts on his lethal combination of left hook to the liver and right to the jaw.

You Can't Condemn This System

SOCCER TRANSFERS HELP THE PLAYERS

By BILLY WRIGHT

Football transfers... you either like them or hate them... but you can never ignore them. Right now fans are discussing possible transfers... players are wondering whether they will shortly join new clubs... managers are dreaming of footballers they need to strengthen their sides.

Is all this transfer talk good for the game? Many condemn our system out of hand; but if they sat down and considered all aspects of it they would probably take a different line.

I think our transfer system is a good one. After all, no footballer is forced to be transferred from one club to another, and think how a transfer fee can help a club and quite often a player.

First of all, let's examine the cash and the club which receives it. Maybe have been going through a lean period with gate receipts falling.

Overheads have to be met, including players' wages, and many a time a transfer fee helps a club to get over a great financial crisis.

What of the player who has been transferred? Frequently young footballers because of the playing strength of their club, find it difficult to get into the first team.

Then comes the opportunity to move to another club—and the record books prove that, dozens of youngsters have found fame after a transfer.

Dick Neal, brilliant young Lincoln City left-half, is a typical example.

He was a promising lad at Wolverhampton. Now he is a member of the England Under-23 side—after being transferred to Lincoln, where he was able to gain a regular place.

PUBLICITY VALUE

There is another aspect of transfers one must never forget. It is their publicity value, especially towards the end of the season. A new player in a side—especially if he is a man with a big reputation—gives a tremendous fillip to clubs.

It adds interest to the team. People go along to see the "new boy".

I know there are people who nod their heads in disgust at the thought of publicity being attached to football, but I am one of those who, appropriate in full, the value of letting the world know what you have to sell.

And football, like other forms of entertainment, now has to

REVERSES ALARM TORIES

Sections Of Conservatives Reluctant To Vote In By-Elections

By FRASER WIGHTON

London, Mar. 27.

Mr Harold Macmillan, the Prime Minister, and his new Government face the urgent task of arresting the present decline in the Conservative party's popularity with British voters.

Cabinet Ministers and party managers alike are seriously concerned by the slump in electoral support reflected in Conservative reverses in recent Parliamentary by-elections.

It is widely recognised both among Conservative and Labour Opposition politicians that the swing away from the Government arises from three main causes. They are:

1. The economic and diplomatic aftermath of British armed intervention in Egypt.
 2. The continued rise in the cost of living.
 3. The Government's controversial new Rent Bill, which, when passed into law, will decontrol rents and tenure of 800,000 houses and eventually raise the rents of between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 more.

Conservatives had hoped that the recent change of Prime Minister and Cabinet after Sir Anthony Eden's resignation through ill health would halt an already apparent decline in their party's electoral fortunes. But a group of by-elections fought since the January Government changes has served only to emphasise the drift from the Conservative cause.

The results included the loss of a Government seat in London to Labour and Labour's defeat of a Conservative-backed Liberal in a Welsh constituency.

Withholding Votes

But the main message which the by-elections as a whole contained for the Government was not of a spectacular swing to the left so much as of a failure by many Conservatives to go to the polls at all.

The new Prime Minister is acutely conscious of the danger of the present tendency. In a message to the Conservative candidate in a new by-election, he said that he hoped Conservatives would think twice before they played into the hands of the Socialists by withholding their votes.

"It is at times such as this, when disagreeable remedies have to be applied to deep-seated ills, that their loyal support is most needed," Mr Macmillan said.

Referring to "reduction of the Conservative vote" at by-elections, he said that he understood the motives of some who abstained and sympathised with their grievances, "especially of those who have to live on fixed incomes." The Prime Minister added that these people were not being forgotten by the Government.

In the forefront of Mr Macmillan's mind was clearly what happened at North Lewisham, an industrial-residential district on the south-east border of London, in the first of the recent by-elections. There, the Conservatives' 1955 General Election majority was wiped out and Labour captured the seat by 1,110 votes. An independent "Empire Loyalist" woman candidate who intervened, split the vote and polled 1,487—most of her support being apparently derived from disgruntled Conservatives.

The most significant aspect of this election for the Government, however, was that its share of the total votes polled in the contest fell by 7½ per cent.

This was followed by a bigger drop in the Conservative poll at Wednesbury, in Staffordshire, the English pottery-making country. The Labour defender of the seat substantially increased his party's 1955 majority, though fighting Conservative and Independent opponents compared with only a Conservative stronghold. There, the former Prime Minister's 1955 majority of 13,460 was slashed by five-sixths in a straight fight with Labour, reducing this former "safe" Government seat overnight to a "marginal" constituency which will be highly vulnerable in a General Election. The Conservative share of the poll fell by 12 per cent.

Disillusioned

But the Government's biggest shock came from Sir Anthony Eden's old constituency of Warwick and Leamington, hitherto regarded as a Conservative stronghold. There, the former Prime Minister's 1955 majority of 13,460 was slashed by five-sixths in a straight fight with Labour, reducing this former "safe" Government seat overnight to a "marginal" constituency which will be highly vulnerable in a General Election. The Conservative share of the poll fell by 12 per cent.

In Carmarthen, Wales, on the same day, the Government received a fresh disappointment. It had put forward no candidate of its own for a by-election there, feeling this was too tough a tactical stronghold for a Conservative to crack. But Conservatives were backing the Liberal defender against a Labour challenger, who won the seat.

The Welsh contest was, however, the bitterest pill for Liberals—opposed Britain's ruling party—who had the humiliation of seeing one of their six remaining seats in the British House of Commons fall to a Socialist convert who was once a leading pillar of their own political faith—Lady Megan Lloyd George, daughter of the great David Lloyd George, Britain's Liberal leader in World War I.

The Warwick and Leamington contest was the Government's most serious reverse, for it clearly established for them a new and disturbing factor in current political trends.

The other contests had shown that a section of Conservatives, disillusioned for a variety of reasons, were prepared to withhold their support from their own party or back an independent candidate, but were reluctant to vote for a Socialist. But Warwick and Leamington voters, with only the choice between Socialism and anti-Socialism, demonstrated that in such circumstances they were prepared to express their dissatisfaction by voting for the Labour candidate—whose poll rose from 18,513 in 1955 to 22,791.

Middle Class

Politicians generally conceded, however, that the contest had special features. Sir Anthony Eden's 1955 majority was due in part to personal popularity.

The Government, through Ministerial speeches, has made clear that it has no intention of being panicked by the present trend and by Labour demands for an early General Election. The Eden administration was elected in May 1955, and Conservatives, with a majority of nearly 60 in the House of Commons, need not ask the Queen to dissolve Parliament until the statutory period of five years has expired in 1960.

Mr Macmillan knows that by-elections in Britain rarely give an accurate index of how the whole nation would swing in a General Election. He is also well aware that disillusioned local supporters who might register protests by abstaining from the Government when only one by-election is involved, would be unlikely to risk unseating it in favour of a Labour administration by withholding their support in a General Election.

The nation's annual financial Budget to be announced on April 9 is expected to provide some pointers of how the Government proposes to recapture its lost popularity. It is under heavy pressure from some of its own Parliamentary supporters to provide Income tax and other reliefs for the hard-pressed middle class, which is believed to be the section of the electorate principally concerned in recent Conservative difficulties. The rising cost of living weighs especially heavily on fixed-income groups of the population, who have always been looked upon in the past as being the most "loyal" Conservative supporters.

Mr Macmillan's problem is how to reconcile relief to the tax-payer, which are being demanded also by the 8,000,000 strong trade union movement, with current pressure on the economy following the Suez crisis.

The nation's bill for armed intervention in Egypt includes not only the cost of the military operation, which runs into many million pounds sterling but also the damage suffered by the economy through the subsequent oil shortage after the blocking of the Suez Canal and the severing of Middle East pipelines. This development compelled the Government to introduce petrol rationing, accompanied by increases in petrol duty and price—measures which are believed to have played their part in the present swing away from the Conservatives.

The Government has announced that it is reviewing Britain's annual defence expenditure of around £1,500,000,000 with a view to substantial cuts by reducing ground forces in Europe and concentrating on guided missiles equipment. The amount which it eventually decides to save under this head may well govern what concessions it is able to offer in the April Budget.

Meanwhile, Ministers appear convinced that the present loss of Conservative popularity, though serious, is a temporary phase, and that Mr Macmillan is capable of providing a reasonably speedy answer to it. —China Mail Special.

Yugoslavia Wants West To Help In Refugee Problem

By JOHN EARLE

Belgrade, Mar. 27.

Yugoslavs complain, with a certain bitterness, that the West is failing to help relieve them of their burden of over 17,000 Hungarian refugees.

Mr Svetislav Stefanovic, Minister of the Interior, declared in a statement in February that some Western countries "were showing 'lack of understanding' by admitting only a handful of the 12,000 out of those 17,000 who wished to emigrate abroad."

"It is evident that some countries honour more in words than in deed the principle of free determination of destination by refugees," he declared. At the time he spoke, only 214 had been accepted by Western countries. The United States, Australia and Canada were most popular among refugees as destinations, he said, but had not taken any. Only France was willing to admit refugees without limitations, while Israel accepted Hungarian Jewish refugees.

Financial Burden

The financial burden of maintaining refugees was too big a strain for Yugoslavia, "We ask to be refunded the costs hitherto of maintaining the refugees, and that special funds be set aside for further expenditure, for our economy is not able to bear such a big unforeseen burden," Mr Stefanovic declared.

"Many refugees," he continued, "are living in tourist hotels and hostels, which are empty during the winter but will be needed when the tourist season begins again in the spring."

Foreign observers here recall that the flow of refugees to Yugoslavia only started on a large scale in January. On January 1, there were 1,748 Hungarian refugees in Yugoslavia. Six weeks later, there were about ten times that number.

At that time, Yugoslavia's relations with the Kadar Government and with the Soviet authorities in Hungary were delicate as a result of the Soviet abduction of the former Prime Minister.

Minister, Mr Imre Nagy, when he left the asylum of the Yugoslav Embassy in Budapest.

In November, Yugoslavia also declined an offer of aid from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the ground that in view of their small numbers such aid was not necessary.

Then, in January, the situation changed. As the flow of refugees to Austria slackened, it increased towards Yugoslavia because the Hungarian and Soviet authorities were slower to impose strict controls along the whole southern border with Yugoslavia.

The Yugoslav attitude also changed as the cost of maintaining refugees increased. The Yugoslav Government turned to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees who, after a survey made by its representative, Mr Arvid Rodhe, of Iran, established an office in Belgrade under a Frenchman, M. Pierre Brumont.

The Hungarian Government sent a repatriation mission. Foreign correspondents were invited to watch while refugees desiring repatriation were interviewed by a joint Hungarian-Yugoslav commission, in the presence of an United Nations observer.

Acceptance

A United States Embassy official, questioned about the failure to accept any refugees so far, said that all details had been sent back to Washington and instructions were awaited.

An official of the British Embassy, which handles Australian internees, stated that the Australian Government was only willing to accept Hungarian refugees who already had relatives in Australia.—China Mail Special.

Insures Body For $100,000

Singapore, Mar. 27. The Malayan strip-tease queen, Rose Chan, today insured her 30-24-36 figure for 100,000 Straits dollars against accidents during her forthcoming trip to Paris for a "Miss Strip-Tease" contest.

Rose, who strips while wrestling a python in her latest act, said she is excited about competing against professional strippers in Europe.

She will fly to France for the international contest, reported to be taking place in June. — Reuter.
